SHORT-CHAIN & MEDIUM-CHAIN FATTY ACIDS

Made Available For The Gut Microbiome And The Colonocytes

What is Epithefood™?

EpitheFood™ delivers different short-chain (SCFAs) and mediumchain (MCFAs) fatty acids into the colon. These fatty acids are offered as mono-, di- and triglycerides. These glycerides of fatty acids are broken down by the enzymes of the microbiome into fatty acids. The glycerides of EpitheFood™ mostly arrive in the ileum and colon.

What are Gut Problems?

Constipation

Ulcers

Spasms

Syndrome

Reflux

Gastroenteritis

Pain

Acid

Peptic

Gallstones

Root Causes of Gut Problems?

1) The bacterial flora of your colon is disturbed.

It causes irritation (inflammation) for the colon wall cells.
Nerve cells signal pain.
The immune system slows down or overreacts.
The mucus which protects the colon wall gets damaged.
The colon content (!) leaks into the blood.
Your body is poisoned, weak and tired.

2) How is the microbiome (bacterial flora) getting disturbed?

FOOD

Only your own body can solve these problems ... with a little help from a friend.

BUTYRIC ACID IS YOUR FRIEND.

Butyric acid serves as a pivotal regulator of gut metabolism. Typically, it is generated by the bacterial flora within the colon. However, disruptions in the bacterial flora, often associated with gut issues, can lead to a deficiency of butyric acid. Functioning as a transcription factor, butyric acid plays a crucial role in determining the production of proteins and enzymes by colonocytes and epithelial cells in the colon. Similarly, certain bacteria respond to signals to produce enzymes that synthesize butyric acid from dietary fibers present in stools. Given its role as a catalyst in cellular and bacterial activation, only minimal quantities of butyric acid are required. However, reaching the colon in sufficient amounts poses a challenge, as the body's demand for butyric acid depletes it before it reaches the colon. Notably, Epithefood addresses this issue by providing a protective coating for butyric acid, ensuring its safe passage to the colon. Subsequently, bacterial lipases break down this protective coating, making butyric acid readily available.

Epithefood® transports butyric acid safely into the colon.

Butyric acid normally never makes it to the colon.

If taken orally, butyric acid never makes it into the colon. The body absorbs it immediately in the small intestine. This is made possible by our pancreatic lipases who break down triglycerides of butyric acid to get the butyric acid into the body before it gets into the colon. It is a fight that cannot be won. Epithefood® is not vulnerable to our own pancreatic lipases and does not suffer from these fights. Hence the butyric acid gets safely into the colon.
